CHARACTERS

Romans Who Accompany You

The Senator

Recognized by his laurel wreath. Speaks of gold and politics. His poems are steeped in the wisdom of the Senate and greed for denarii.

Appears when collecting coins and reaching milestone points.

The Centurion

Recognized by his facial scar. Strict, disciplined. Speaks in short, clipped phrases. His poems are orders.

Appears when ramming and taking damage.

The Legionary

The main fighter. No special ornaments, but strong in spirit. His poems are battle cries.

Appears at game start, when ramming, and at milestones.

The Merchant

Always happy about money. His poems are about profit and gain. A member of the equestrian class - wealthy traders.

Appears when collecting coins and colliding with enemies.

The Gladiator

With golden earrings, a former slave turned fighter. His poems are about strength and victory.

Appears at milestones and when ramming.

The Slave

The most humble character. Amazed by everything. His poems are childlike exclamations of pain and surprise.

Appears when collecting coins, taking damage, and at game start.

FATES

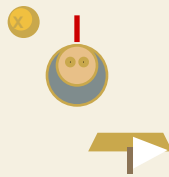

Stories of Each Character

Fate of the Senator: Gaius Julius Aurelius

Gaius Julius Aurelius is a descendant of an ancient lineage. He has sat in the Senate for 30 years and believes he knows how to run the empire.

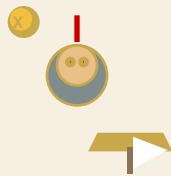

Aurelius has never been on a ship but considers himself an expert on naval affairs. He wrote three treatises, none of which were ever read.

Fate of the Centurion: Marcus Petronius the Iron

Petronius earned the nickname 'The Iron' after the Battle of Cannae (216 BC) when his helmet was knocked off by a sword, but he continued fighting without it.

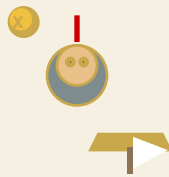

Three scars adorn his face. Petronius considers them decorative and is proud of each.

Fate of the Legionary: Lucius of Tibur

Lucius is an ordinary soldier from the small city of Tibur (modern Tivoli). He dreams of returning home to open a vineyard.

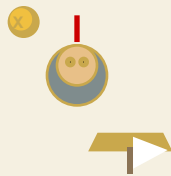

While he rams enemy ships, his vineyard overgrows with weeds. But Lucius believes - one day he will return.

Fate of the Merchant: Aurelia the Sea Trader

Aurelia is one of the few women merchants of Rome. She manages a fleet of 12 trading ships.

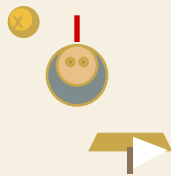

Aurelia sponsors gladiatorial games because she considers them a 'good investment in PR'.

Fate of the Gladiator: Spartacus Junior

Grandson of a follower of the great Spartacus (or so he claims). In reality, he was born in Rome and was never a slave.

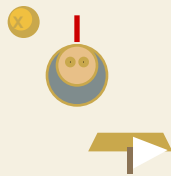

But his story sells arena tickets twice as well.

Fate of the Slave: Poor Felix

Felix is a slave-scribe who records senators' speeches. The only literate person in the crew.

Felix dreams of freedom. His master promised to free him when he records 1000 speeches. He's currently on number 847.

STRATEGIES

Secrets of an Experienced Captain

Beginner Captain

1. Don't panic - rocks move slowly on early levels.
2. Stay in the center - it's easier to dodge both ways.
3. Don't ram every ship - wait for the enemy to be on line.
4. Collect coins - they're safe and give points.

Veteran Warrior

1. Use the ram proactively - destroy enemies before they approach.
2. Watch the cooldown - you're vulnerable during recharge.
3. At higher levels, dodging takes priority over destroying.

Legendary Strategist

1. On the final level - minimum rams, maximum dodging.
2. Collect coins only in 'safe windows'.
3. Remember: speed grows with points. The better you play, the harder it gets!

CONCLUSION

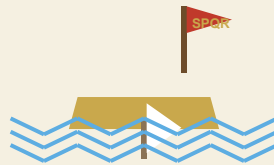

Ave, Captain!

Final Words

This book is your guide to the world of Roman Galleys. You've learned the history of the Roman fleet, explored the banks of the Tiber and the pyramids of Egypt, and read the fates of six Romans.

Every time you click 'BATTLE!', you become part of a great story.

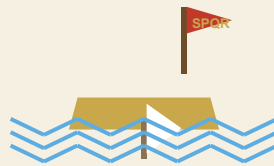

Wisdom of Rome

Dum spiro, spero - While I breathe, I hope

Fortuna audaces iuvat - Fortune favors the bold

Dulce et decorum est pro patria mori - It is sweet and fitting to die for one's country (Horace)

All roads lead to Rome - and all rivers lead to victory!

Ave, Captain!

The Empire awaits new victories. The Tiber flows. The galley is ready.

Ave, imperator! Morituri te salutant!

(Hail, emperor! Those about to die salute you!)
